00:00	The camera cuts to a street scene of the mall at Church Street, Parramatta where people are shopping and walking around. A caption flashes on screen with a graphic showing many individual people. The caption reads “Population of 2 million people”. The camera then cuts to a close-up shot of people’s legs and feet as they walk on a road. A caption flashes on screen with a graphic showing tall buildings. The caption reads “Fourth-largest city”.	With a population of two million people, Western Sydney would be Australia’s fourth-largest city in its own right.
00:05	The camera cuts back to the satellite image of Badgerys Creek, and a small video box appears of aerial footage showing a plane landing on a runway. A caption flashes on screen and reads “Catalyst for the region’s economic future”. The next caption flashes on screen showing many individual people. The caption reads “Population +1 million by the 2030s.”	A Western Sydney Airport will be a catalyst for the region’s economic future as a further one million people move to the area by the 2030s.
00:17	The camera cuts to a satellite image with the highlighted airport site before beginning a very slow, anticlockwise orbit. Elizabeth Drive and The Northern Road are labelled. Three captions flash on screen. The first caption reads “More jobs closer to home” and has a graphic of three people in hard hats. The second caption reads “Connecting businesses nationally” and has a graphic outline of Australia. The third caption reads “Connecting businesses internationally” and has a graphic map of the world centred on the Indian Ocean.	The proposed airport will support this growing population by creating more jobs closer to home and better connecting businesses to national and international markets.
